“Let us not speak of those days when coffee beans filled the morning with hope, when our mothers' headscarves hung like white flags on washing lines”

“Let us not speak of men, stolen from their beds at night.

Let us not say the word

disappeared.* ”

“Let us not remember the first smell of rain.

Instead, let us speak of our lives now-the gates and bridges and stores.

And when we break bread in cafés and at kitchen tables

with our new brothers,

let us not burden them with stories of war or abandonment.”
